FIRST ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Post-Surgical Pain

In an era of increasing surgical volumes and a persistent opioid crisis, the need for action in addressing post-surgical pain has never been more urgent. As physicians and scientists, we have the power to improve pain management and surgical outcomes through innovative approaches and by advancing the science behind superior treatment modalities.

While traditional anesthesiology conferences have concentrated on the delivery of anesthesia, and pain conferences on spine pain management, the critical issue of post-surgical pain management often remains under-addressed. Surgical conferences tend to focus on advancing surgical techniques, leaving a gap in comprehensive post-surgical care. Our annual conference is set to bridge this gap.

Inaugural Annual Conference Highlights:

Our conference will present a dynamic scientific program dedicated exclusively to the management of acute post-surgical pain in hospitals, sub-acute pain in the community, and chronic pain in medical offices.

This event is essential for professionals across all surgical specialties, anesthesiology, emergency medicine, and physical therapy. It offers a unique platform for sharing insights and discussing strategies to enhance surgical pain management and outcomes.

Join us in Tampa, this September, for an engaging educational experience that promises to equip you with new insights and enthusiasm for the future of post-surgical pain management.

Warmest regards,

Arun Kalava, MD, FASA, EDRA
Chairman & Founder, ASPSP

Expected Attendance at the First Annual Conference on Post-Surgical Pain

In the face of increasing surgical volumes and the ongoing opioid crisis, the inaugural conference on Post-Surgical Pain emerges as a critical platform for clinicians, scientists, and industry partners from across the nation. We anticipate a diverse group of professionals to attend, including, but not limited to anesthesiologists, surgeons, Advanced Practice Providers (APP), Certified Nurse Anesthetists (CRNA), Anesthesiologist Assistants (AA), nurses, pharmacists, and physical therapists. This multidisciplinary gathering is a testament to our collective commitment to advancing pain management and surgical outcomes.

This Program is Eligible for Continuing Medical Education (CME) Credits

Details on the final CME credits available will be announced prior to the event, reflecting our dedication to providing valuable educational content that meets the ongoing learning needs of healthcare professionals.

Our Educational Program

The First Annual Conference on Post-Surgical Pain is poised to set a new standard in the discourse on pain management. With a focus on the acute management of post-surgical pain in hospital settings, sub-acute pain management in the community and emergency rooms, and the treatment of chronic pain in medical offices, our program addresses a critical gap in current medical education and practice.

Unlike traditional conferences, our event zeroes in on the often-overlooked aspect of post-surgical pain, offering a comprehensive platform for the latest in evidence-based treatments, innovative approaches, and the science behind effective pain management strategies. Our faculty, comprising seasoned experts across various specialties, will share insights into anatomy and physiology, therapeutic mechanisms, novel techniques, and evolving technologies—all aimed at enhancing patient care, access to therapies, and overall outcomes.

Special Features of the Annual Conference

Scheduled to take place in Tampa this September, the conference promises not just a wealth of learning opportunities but also a chance for hands-on experience. It stands out as a unique forum for professionals across surgical specialties, anesthesiology, emergency medicine, and physical therapy to exchange ideas, strategies, and best practices in the pursuit of improving post-surgical pain management and patient outcomes.

We invite you to join us for what promises to be an engaging, enlightening, and empowering event.
